

Accessible Transport in and around Glasgow

Accessible transport is one of the 'Seven Needs' identified by disabled people as being essential for independent living. Unfortunately, at the present time there is only limited accessible public transport operating within the Greater Glasgow area.

Many railway stations within the area are not fully accessible and, in addition, the bus services are not accessible. This means that disabled people who cannot use public services and who do not have their own transport have a limited number of choices.

This factsheet contains information on accessible services that are provided by the local authority, voluntary organisations and commercial organisations. It also contains information on the concessionary schemes run by the Scottish Executive and by Strathclyde Partnership for Transport.

Scottish Government

Scotland-wide Concessionary Bus Service

This scheme allows disabled people to travel free on any local bus service, or scheduled long distance coach service, anywhere in Scotland at any time, including during the rush hour (the scheme is also available to all people aged 60 and over but the information here relates solely to disabled people). The scheme does not allow free travel on buses that charge premium fares, City Sightseeing Buses, tours or excursions.

Disabled people living on the Western Isles, Orkney and Shetland are entitled to two free return ferry journeys to the Scottish mainland every financial year. The ferry vouchers will be issued separately from the National Entitlement Card and will be automatically reissued every year.

A Scottish Citizens' National Entitlement Card (Entitlement Card), which is free, is needed to use the scheme. Everyone who applies for an Entitlement Card, whether they are applying on the basis of age or disability, must live in Scotland. To qualify for an Entitlement Card a person must be 60 years old or over, or are of fare paying age (under 60) and meet the criteria.

People aged 5 years and over, whose mobility is so bad that they need someone to help them when they travel, can apply for an Entitlement Card with companion. These allow the eligible person and one companion to travel free of charge, together for the same journey by bus. The companion can be a different person from journey to journey providing they get on and off the bus at the same places as the card holder.

There is no need for a companion cardholder to be accompanied on all journeys they make. They have the choice of whether to travel on their own or whether to have a companion with them. You qualify for a companion card if you meet the qualifying criteria. You:

- ❖ receive the higher or middle rate of the care component of Disability Living Allowance;
- ❖ receive Attendance Allowance;
- ❖ receive War Pensions Constant Attendance Allowance;
- ❖ are registered as blind;
- ❖ live in a residential home or hospital and are eligible for the higher or middle rate of the care component of DLA or attendance allowance

People who live in the area covered by Strathclyde's Concessionary Travel Scheme can also use their Entitlement Card to get cheaper fares on First ScotRail trains and the Glasgow Subway within the area covered by the Strathclyde Scheme.

Disabled people can obtain an application form from their local social work office. Information on where a person should apply can be obtained by contacting the Travel Card Unit at Strathclyde Partnership for Transport.

Strathclyde Partnership for Transport (SPT)

Strathclyde Concessionary Travel Scheme

This scheme is available to disabled people who are permanently resident in the scheme area (the former Strathclyde Regional Council area) and who meet the criteria (the scheme is also available to older people but the information here relates solely to disabled people).

The Strathclyde Concessionary Travel Scheme offers reduced fares on First ScotRail services, which start and finish within the Scheme's boundaries, and on Glasgow's Subway. Free travel is also available on named, local ferry routes serving a person's place of residence if they are permanently resident on one of the islands in the area of the Scheme or on the Cowal or Rosneath peninsulas.

The bus part element of the Strathclyde Scheme has been replaced by the new, Scotland-wide Free Bus Travel Scheme. An Entitlement Card is needed to obtain free bus travel and reduced fares on trains and the Subway.

As a result of the changes, the only public transport that still needs a Strathclyde Concessionary Travel Scheme Card for is the ferry. Any existing Strathclyde scheme cards with a ferry entitlement on it should be kept. A Companion Travel Card will also be needed for use on ferries if there is a ferry entitlement named on it. The companion must be five years old or over and must start and end their journey with the person they are helping.

Dial-a-Bus

Dial-a-Bus is available to people who are unable to use, or have difficulty in using, standard buses to access their local community. It can be used for most purposes including shopping, visiting friends, attending local clubs, doctor and health centre appointments and hospital visiting.

However, Dial-a-Bus cannot be used for hospital appointments and anyone who has difficulty attending hospital appointments should contact their GP surgery.

All vehicles are wheelchair-accessible with low-floor ramp access at the front of the vehicle. The vehicle will pick up and drop off as near as possible to a person's home and chosen destination. The driver will assist passengers on and off the bus but not into or out of their homes. Passengers can take an escort with them if they wish.

It is at a driver's discretion to provide assistance carrying shopping for passengers. Therefore, passengers should only take on as much shopping as they are able to comfortably carry themselves.

People must hold a valid National Concessionary Entitlement Card before they can access the Dial-a-Bus service. Anyone who does not hold a card should contact the SPT Travel Card unit on 0141 333 3211. Information about the service is also on the SPT website at www.spt.co.uk
